Interesting News Items Pertaining to Boards and Business.

The Kellar Lumber Co. are shipping about 50 cars a week.

Brown Bros. are shipping from forty to fifty cars a week.

Brown Bros. and the Eagle Lumber Co. are sawing on the finest lots of logs ever brought to town. They will run 40 per cent. to uppers.

John Oxenford, of Rathbore & Co., is in the city this week selling off the balance of the company's stock. They have several hundred thousand feet here yet.

Day & Daniels' six million which the Stevens mill is cutting, is a fine lot of lumber. They have not yet begun to sell, and will probably dispose of it in a lump.

The Oneida Lumber Company have overhauled the Buttrick mill to such an extent that it is practically rebuilt. The new band is now running nicely, with Frank Davis at the lever and the company expect to make a good cut from now on.

W. L. Beers and Ed. Brazell have made considerable money at logging the past year. They put in about three million for W. H. Bradley last winter and made a good thing out of it. This summer they have a camp a few miles above here on the Wisconsin, where they are putting in a million.

Brown & Robbins were forced to shut down the band side of their mill yesterday. A breakage in the feed caused it. This mill is cutting on an average of 165,000 a day. They are nearly through with the Underwood logs and will begin on the Menasha Wooden Ware Co.'s stock next week.

Lumber sales of local wholesalers are all that can be asked for. The market is on the raise, with no perceptible let up in sight. Prices have been advanced by dealers all through this valley and orders are coming in as fast as they can be taken care of. The stocks will hardly be given a chance to grow any, as the shipments from this point are now nearly as much as the mills are cutting.

The Kellar Lumber Company, of this city, have about 16,000,000 feet on their yards and will have about 30,000,000 this season. Geo. Clayton, who runs the saw mill which cuts their timber, is running night and day and the choice logs of the Kellar Company, which are known as Day Bros' logs, are about finished up. This company is doing a near business and will have a nice stock to furnish the trade.

Brown Bros. night band Sawyer went away on a visit one day last week, and got Frank Davis to take his place for a night. The saw had been cutting about forty thousand and Frank ran off fifty-seven thousand without turning a hair. The night Sawyer heard of it and the next night put the mark up to sixty thousand. Come to think of it, Rhinelander has got several sawyers who can give that Merrill man quite a run.

The question of who is the best Sawyer in the country is about as hard to settle as the exact size of Harrison's majority this fall. The Merrill Lumber Co. is said to have a cracker-jack on their rotary who challenges the world. Rhinelander has a man who is said by expert judges to be the best rotary Sawyer in the northwest. It is George Berkhardt who has been in the employ of Brown & Robbins for a number of years. He can handle a steam nigger better any man in Wisconsin, no matter where he comes from.

The Yawkey & Lee Lumber Company have their box factory at Hazelhurst running and will make a good thing on their investment. If there is a firm in the valley which can make money it is Yawkey & Lee. They are peculiarly adapted to each other and their business. Cy. Yawkey is one of the ideal office men who can keep the loose ends from getting out of reach and be as sure to a friend as Bill Bradley, while Lee is a lumberman who thoroughly understands handling men and hustling them.

W. E. Kelley, of Bradley & Kelley, was in the city last week. He said: "I have just returned from the mill and am very happy to miss the warm days of last week among the pines of Wisconsin. Our mill at McNaughton is cutting 100,000 feet per day, two tours. We have in winter and summer and probably will have 25,000,000 feet for this year's work. With 8,000,000 in pile we are able to fill our orders nicely." They have a large quantity of timber located near this point and Mr. Kelley reports having a very nice business.

A writer on the Chicago Timberman, under the heading of "Keep Out the Flies" furnishes the following concerning the Screen Door people and their institution:

"An industry in the valley that has not had much notice is the Wabash Screen Door Co., with a large factory at Rhinelander and a jobbing warehouse at Wabash, Ind. One year ago this company, who have so successfully put on the market their screen doors for five years past, found it was the wise thing to do to get close to the lumber supply and selected Rhinelander as the place to go to, and made preparations accordingly by building a large factory which is 60 feet wide and 250 long, three stories and a basement, the latter being used mostly for the shafting, etc., which operates 36 machines on the floor above. There are 60,000 feet of floor space in the building and it is a busy sight to see these 36 machines in full motion and 150 men at work. The engine house is built of brick as is the store house for storing paints and oils, and is fire proof. The drying capacity is furnished by a Sturdevant two room kiln, which are 17x42 feet. The amount of lumber consumed annually is about 6,000,000 feet and 280,000 screen doors are made and sold each season. The lumber is both pine and hardwood and the latter stock is being used more every year. The building is lighted by an Edison dynamo and 150 incandescent lights. The company has recently contracted with the one and only John W. Thomas, who has so successfully introduced the Grinnell sprinkler in so many factories for a complete equipment of sprinklers. Ample fire protection is secured from stand pipes through the building as well. The men employed keep their own time by the use of the Bulley Automatic Time Recorder made at Binghamton, N. Y. The company is offered by H. C. Bruner, president, who looks after the business at Wabash, while E. M. Kemp, secretary and treasurer of the company, one of the most enterprising young men of the north, has full charge at Rhinelander."

The Congressional Convention. Next Tuesday is the day set for the 9th District Congressional Convention here. There will be something like 100 visitors to the city for that occasion and it is our duty as citizens of the place to see that the visitors are properly shown the city, its advantages and points of interest. Every man who has the accommodations should see that some one or two of these guests of the city are driven about town and given a chance to see the best town in the Wisconsin Valley. The convention will be called in the court-house on Tuesday at 4 o'clock p.m. No doubt an adjournment will be taken before the nomination is made, and the evening session will no doubt be attended by a great many from the city. Some excellent speakers will be here and a good old republican meeting will result.

Amusements. The latest farce comedy success "Is Marriage a Failure" will be presented at the Grand Opera House Saturday evening, Aug. 13, by the La Brandt Comedy Co. The comedy is said to be very funny and clever and refined. The stars Mr. and Mrs. Joseph La Brandt are unusually clever people and their support, including the wonderful child actress "Little Irene" is good. Every one having doubts as to whether marriage is a failure or not should secure seats as a clever performance is guaranteed.

The Swedish Concert. The Student Quartette, of Minneapolis, composed of Scandinavian singers of high ability and reputation will give a concert in the Grand Opera House next Tuesday evening, August 16, under the auspices of the new Swedish church society. The occasion will also be made interesting by some good talks by good speakers. The admission is 25 cents, and 50c for reserved seats.

The Sewerage Carried. About fifty voters assembled at the hose house Tuesday at 1 o'clock to vote on the question of putting in the two pieces of sewerage which have been advertised in the special election notices. The question of raising money to build both pieces was carried easily. The town board will meet in a few days and no doubt advertise for bids to do the work at once.

We Want An Agent in every town reached by the New Norri, more especially in Rhinelander. Any man or woman who can give all or a part of their time to selling our goods will find it to their interest to write at once to the

Mr. and Mrs. George Pillsbury gave a party to a number of young people last Wednesday evening.

The Episcopal ladies gave a pleasant picnic to the Sabbath school children yesterday at Lake Julia.

All northern Wisconsin delegates so far elected to the state convention are in favor of Upham for governor.

Town Clerk Carr's new office in the Clover block is the neatest that Pelican has ever afforded for its business resort.

A party of young people were pleasantly entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Conroy Tuesday evening.

Forest county held its convention last Friday to elect delegates to the Congressional convention here on the 16th inst. The delegates were instructed for M. H. McCord.

The young men's dance at the Rhinelander Opera House last Friday evening was one of the pleasantest events of the kind of this season. The Italian music was fine.

Old Olson's Troubles troubled a fair sized house at the Grand last Thursday evening for over two hours. The show was all that could be expected; simply no good.

Dr. Exyllus, the fellow who was convicted and fined last week for failing to notify the health officers of a diphtheria case, refused to pay his fine and went to jail in preference.

Egbert Wyman, of Cranston, was married Wednesday to Miss Jennie M. Whiteley, of Milwaukee. They have the congratulations of Mr. Wyman's numerous friends in this section.

Frank Easton has been appointed express agent for the U. S. Company and has moved the office to the building formerly occupied by the town clerk. Frank will attend to the office well.

Don Lewis is the latest victim of the bicycle mania. A wrestling match between him and the wheel has been arranged to take place on the Wisconsin river bridge at 7:30 this evening.

Miss Alice Dayton, who is in the city a guest of her sister, Mrs. P. W. Nichols, is a recent graduate of the American Conservatory of Music of Chicago, and while here will organize a class in instrumental music. Those who desire instruction will do well to avail themselves of this opportunity.

The contract for grading and clearing the Kirk company site has been let by the Advancement Association to W. L. Beers and Bob Getchel for $570. They have a large crew of men and teams at work there now and will soon have the ground ready. Superintendent Hunter is ready to begin building as soon as the graders are through.

Will M. Langley and Mary Siems were married July 11 and not a word has appeared in the local papers in reference to it. This is due to Will's neglect to notify the printers either of his intention, determination or successful consummation of the transformation, but now that it is done and all over with, the congratulations are tendered and the usual good wishes for prosperity and happiness go.

This is a great time for the Indians. The blueberry crop is an exceptionally good one and the price asked of seven cents a quart is easily obtained. Alcohol is no higher than usual and water to adulterate it is as free as salvation. The natural result of this combination of circumstances is a good many drunks among the red brothers and sisters. One of them fell off the limited Tuesday night, while it was going about forty miles an hour and was so badly used up that he couldn't do anything all the next forenoon.

The new Norwegian and Danish church on the North side is about completed, and will be dedicated in a few weeks. The structure has a very presentable appearance and is in a good sightly place. The society now hold services in the Lutheran church on the North side. The money for erecting this new church has nearly all been raised by subscription and the lumber was about all donated by local mill firms. Rev. M. Michelson, the pastor, is an earnest, intelligent worker and has a good sized congregation. He also holds services in Tomahawk, Antigo and Elcho.

A fine lot of books and stationery at E. C. Leonard's.

Why pay contract prices for sewing machines when you can buy the Household at Gray's at a reasonable price.

For the Republican State Convention at Milwaukee, Aug. 17, 1892, the M. L. S. & W. Ry. will sell excursion tickets to Milwaukee and return at a rate of one fare for the round trip.

Tickets on sale Aug. 15 to 17 inclusive. Good to return until and including Aug. 19, 1892.

The regular monthly supper of the M. E. church will be given Wednesday August 17, from 5 to 8 p. m., arrangements having been made to occupy the beautiful lawn at Judge Albion's residence. Should the weather prove unfavorable the supper will be given in the Methodist church.

The Rhinelander and Antigo ball teams played another game Sunday at the latter club's grounds, which resulted in a score of 5-6 in favor of the home team. It was a well played game and was won by Antigo in the 9th inning, they getting three runs in. Jacobson and Melndoe formed the battery for the locals.

The saloonkeepers of Oshkosh own at least thirteen of them, have formed a trust or a combine and the result is that the thirsty people of that city will now pay more for their drinks. A new schedule has been adopted with an advance of 50 per cent. in most beverages. All mixed drinks will now cost 15 cents. The only beverage untouched is beer. That remains at 5 cents.

Ed. Brazell, who came out as a candidate for the republican nomination for sheriff now seems to have good prospects of securing it. He will no doubt secure a solid home endorsement at the caucus and his candidacy is well received here. Ed. is able to give any democrat who may be nominated a good run for the office, and he is a man perfectly able to fill the position.

The town of Pelican Republican caucuses were held last evening and eight delegates elected to the convention which meets to-day. On the north side George Porter and Peter Brown were chosen. In the high school district S. S. Miller, W. E. Brown and L. J. Billings were chosen. In the south side district G. H. Clark, J. W. McCormick and G. W. Bishop were chosen. Eagle River sends four delegates; Minocqua and Hazelhurst two each.

J. R. Binder has recently added one of the celebrated Francis engraving machines to his outfit of tools and is now enabled to engrave anything from the inside of a small finger ring to a coffin plate or water pitcher. Hereafter all goods bought at his store will be beautifully engraved free of charge in English, Roman, Gothic or plain or fancy script letters. With the aid of this machine the finest engraving known to the jeweler's art can be executed at the shortest notice.

City and return at one lowest first class fare for the round trip. Tickets on sale Aug. 20 to 25 inclusive. Good for continuous going passage in each direction, with final limit for return passage until Sept. 15, '92.

The great district fair will be held at Stevens Point Sept. 13, 14, 15 and 16, this year. No trotting races will be given, but a string of running horses such as was never before seen in the state, will be there. It will be a regular jockey club meeting and we predict will draw more spectators for the fair than a lot of faded-up races between three minute campaigners who are this season working northern Wisconsin.

"Is Marriage a Failure?"

At the Princess Opera House last night the Leibrandt Comedy Co. presented the laughable farce, "Is Marriage a Failure?" Joseph Leibrandt made an excellent bald-headed lawyer who married for money and got woefully cheated. William H. Woodside played the part of Tommy Little-chubb satisfactorily. Mrs. Joseph Leibrandt made an excellent Ruth Temperton, and Mrs. J. A. Peake was a genuine Surety Podsnap.
Anna Bruce as Tippias, and Ernest Pope as Paul Harwood did their parts well, but little Irene as Dot made the real hit of the evening. Her clear voice was perfectly distinct in all parts of the room, and her simplicity and sweetness were irresistible.
Her dancing also was very pretty and brought down the house at every new example. Altogether, the entertainment was a very successful and enjoyable one. It was greeted by a large audience.—Chicago Times, Mch 17, 1892.

"IF I WERE FAIR."
If I were fair
If I had little hands, and slender feet;
If my cheeks the color rich and sweet
Came at a word, and faded at a frown;
If the clinging curls of burnished brown;
If I had dancing eyes, and with smiles,
And graceful limbs, and pretty girlish whims—
If I were fair, Love would not turn aside;
Life's path, so narrow, would be broad and wide.
If I were fair.
If I were fair,
Perhaps like other maidens I might hold
A true heart's state of trial and tested gold.
Love waits on beauty, though sweet Love alone
It seems to me, for night might well alone
But beauty's charm is strong, and Love obeys,
The magic which makes the heart obey.
If I were fair, my eyes would send no fear;
Life would not meet in pictures to my view,
If I were fair.
If I were fair,
Perhaps the baby with a golden ring,
To play my neck would throw a way it lay,
And like its playmates in its shining hair,
Devoted by the magic of its play;
But now—O! shadow of a girl's face;
Unearthly lips that faintly smile and fade,
You will not blame the child whose words are true,
Not on the blighted land, but on the rose
Of youth and love.
If I were fair,
O, just a little fair, with some soft touch
About my face to glorify it;
The question of my presence, or my kiss,
My heart would not be so much in his eyes.
"Tis said, each maiden sold at last her soul,
And perfect light shall dawn on each blind soul,
When dawn's first rays merge in sunset's bars,
And night is done. And then beyond the stars
I shall be true!
—Edith Maister, in London Spectator.

THE SPECTER WEDDING.

A Curious But All-Sufficient Ceremony.

Mr. Martin Dupont was a justice of the peace in the little town of Marlburg. He had been elected to office at the close of the year of 1812, and had acted in his present capacity for nearly nine years. Men of Mr. Dupont's type were very common in those days, and even now one does not have to search far to find one of these self-complacent, pompous gentlemen, who delight in winning admiration from their associates, who always have at their tongue's end a great many stories in which they play the leading part, but who are, nevertheless, very superficial, so much so, indeed, that a glimpse of the moon over the left shoulder, or a howling dog, has power to make them melancholy for a week.

Having failed to secure for himself as large a share of this world's goods as he had wished, Mr. Dupont was fully resolved that his two children, Henry and Margaret, should not be lacking in wealth. As for his son, he very wisely concluded that a good education, added to his natural abilities, would secure for him a place in the world; and already Henry was showing the wisdom of the plan, and by his rapid advancement in business was more than fulfilling his father's expectations. It had always been Mr. Dupont's desire that his daughter should marry some rich man, but Margaret had fallen in love, very foolishly, according to her father's idea, with the principal of the Marlburg high school.

Charles Foster had several times pleaded his suit in vain before Mr. Dupont. There was no fault in the young man, Mr. D. rather gradually admitted, except that he had to depend upon his salary, but still no man should presume to become his son-in-law who had not money enough to support his daughter in better style than that in which she was then living. He liked the school-teacher very well as a friend, but as a son-in-law—that was quite another matter.

Nevertheless Charles and Margaret did not despair of their cause, although Mr. Dupont was seemingly immovable. The thought of an elopement was banished by them both as being dishonorable, and as no other plan seemed practicable they very wisely resolved to wait until some kind fate should come to their aid. This, then, was the condition of affairs when our story begins.

Mr. Dupont's duties as justice of the peace did not confine his law practice to Marlburg, but very frequently he was called away to attend various lawsuits in neighboring towns and hamlets, and it so happened that at this particular time he was engaged in a case of some considerable importance in an adjoining town. On account of the nearness of the place it was Mr. Dupont's custom to drive his own horse back and forth and to spend his nights at home.

One night, on account of an unusual press of business, he was obliged to remain beyond his ordinary time of leaving, and after the work was completed he yielded to the urgent invitation of his client to chat for a few moments. As they pulled away at the choice baymarts, they began to tell each other of various exciting adventures and wonderful experiences. Time slipped away so rapidly that it was after ten o'clock before Mr. Dupont suddenly remembered that a seven-mile drive lay between him and his home. Hastily bidding his friend good-by, he started for the hotel stable to get his horse.

The weather had changed while the two gentlemen had been chatting, and now the ominous stillness and the cloudy sky admonished Mr. Dupont that, if he wished to get home before the rain began to fall, he must hasten. Hastily throwing a quarter to the sleepy hostler, he sprang into his buggy and set out on his homeward way.

ness and the low murmurings of thunder seemed to have affected the horse, too, and the sagacious brute tried constantly to slacken his pace. How lonely it seemed there, no houses, no living being—nothing but the dead in the graveyard beyond. Suddenly the horse stopped and snorted. Mr. Dupont saw two white figures suddenly dart into the road; one stood beside his horse, and the other beckoned him to descend from his wagon. His hair rose, and his tongue seemed glued to his mouth. The silence was terrible. If those white beings would only speak, but no sound came from them. At last in desperation he stammered out:

"Who are you, and what do you mean by stopping me here in this way?" "We are spirits of the departed dead," a sepulchral voice replied, "and we have need of your services; descend from your vehicle, do as we bid you, and on the word of a ghost you shall not be harmed."

The terrified lawyer descended and stood by the speaker's side, while the other ghost tied his horse to a tree and joined them.

"Yield yourself entirely to us and you shall be safe," said the spokesman. "You must needs walk far and must allow us to blindfold your eyes, in order that you may not discover before your time the way to the land of the shades. No more words must be spoken, obey."

Mr. Dupont was so terrified that he could not speak, and in silence allowed a cloth to be bound over his eyes; then, escorted by his ghostly companions, he began to walk. It seemed to him that he would never be allowed to stop; seconds seemed ages every attempt of his to speak was checked by impatient groans of his guides. At last, after walking half around the earth, as it seemed to him, he realized that he was being piloted up some steps, and by the feeling of warmth he knew that he had left the open air.

"The justice of the peace may be seated," said the ghost who had done all the talking.

Mr. Dupont sat down and the cloth was quickly removed from his eyes, revealing to his astonished gaze the interior of a room dimly lighted by wax candles. Every side was hung with black curtains, and on four black-covered stools facing him sat four white-robed specters, while beside him stood another dressed like his companions. Before he had time to more than wonder at his strange surroundings, the spokesman began:

"Mr. Dupont, we have a solemn duty for you to perform. You are a justice of the peace in the world of the living, and a man dear to us on account of your noble life; therefore are you here. We have in these abodes of the dead two young shades recently come from the other world. Each of these died of a broken heart, because a stern parent forbade them to marry. What do you think, sir, of such a parent as that?"

Mr. Dupont wiggled about uneasily in his chair, and at last said: "I think, good shade, it was very wrong of him."

"We knew you would," resumed the ghost, "because you are a kind man, and one who loves his children. Now do we understand you to say that if the poor girl had been your child it would never have happened?"

"Surely it never would," replied the frightened Mr. Dupont.

"We have not misjudged you, then," replied the shade, while the other four ghosts nodded approvingly. "We have summoned you in order that you may unite them in wedlock, so that in this world at least they may be happy. Such a marriage as this is not common among us, so we brought you here, a good justice of the peace, rather than a minister, who might have been shocked at these proceedings. You can marry them just as well as a clergyman. Now, sir, will you oblige us by marrying these two shades? If you will consent, you may depart at once to your home. Will you?"

Marry the two shades? Of course he would; anything to get away from this terrible spot. And so, without the precaution of stipulating his fee, he stammered out:

"Oh, yes, surely, anything you wish." No sooner had he given his consent than one of the black curtains was drawn aside and two other beings in white entered and stood before him. The other shades rose, and Mr. Dupont, not wishing to be the only one to keep his seat, rose too. The good justice had never married shades; he did not know quite how to proceed. They looked exactly alike; he did not know which was the bride and which the groom. He wished he were well out of it, and the only way to gain his wish was to proceed quickly with the ceremony, and so he began at once. Some way he managed to get through, although he could not have told afterward how it was done. He turned to the bride when he said: "Do you take this woman to be your wedded wife?" and to the groom when he should have addressed the bride; but at length, much to his relief, the "I do" was said by each, and the justice finished with the "I pronounce you man and wife."

But all was not yet over. No sooner had the words left his lips than one of the beings before him threw aside its ghostly robe, and there, in a beautiful wedding gown, stood his daughter, Margaret. Mr. Dupont started to speak, but he only gasped, for around him stood the other ghosts; they too, had thrown aside their robes and stood revealed. Could he believe his eyes? Yes, there was no mistake, he had married his daughter to Charles Foster, in the presence of his wife, his son and three family friends; and the justice knew enough of law to realize that the ceremony was binding. The black curtains, too, were torn down, and there they all stood in his own parlor.

CRIME AND CRIMINALS.

An Able Essay by Ex-President R. B. Hayes.

A Social Problem That Threatens Society and Imperils American Institutions—Application of the Golden Rule The Only Cure.

"The World and its Duties Toward Criminals" is the subject of an able essay by ex-President Hayes in the Illustrated World's Fair. From it we take the following pertinent extracts:

Not only are we in some sense responsible for crime, not only are the causes of crime and the perils that threaten our country today linked together as adamant, but where is the man who can say with assurance that his family and those he loves best are proof against the spirit which makes crime in this country? This spirit which leads to crime is abroad in the community, and it may reach and it may ruin the purest and the happiest heartstone to be found within it. It has been so ordained, whether we would have it so or not, that we are, we have been, and we ever shall be, our brothers' keepers.

This, then, is the general principle and its scope, reaching the sources of crime. Let us briefly consider a few facts in detail. Take, for example, the criminal at the beginning, the first step. It is the first step too often that leads down to doom. How do we, as good citizens, meet it? The boy who has committed his first misdemeanor, where do we send him? All over the United States, with but few exceptions, he spends the first night after his arrest in close contact with hardened criminals, professors of burglary, instructors in larceny, adepts in counterfeiting and in every crime. There is no need of it. In Boston they have a jail through which 250,000 criminals have passed, no two of which ever made acquaintance in that jail. Yet all over this country, a ninety-nine out of a hundred of our jails and lockups, the boy who has committed his first offense is placed under the instruction of the old criminals. We have spent a great deal of time and money in seeing that our jails are comfortable, but how about preserving pure and virtuous those who go in there for the first time? Now we have in the United States from three to four thousand of these jails. Suppose that only one boy per year passes into each one of these jails to be made a criminal for life; that makes from 3,000 to 4,000 a year, 30,000 to 40,000 in ten years, 50,000 to 60,000 in the lifetime of a criminal. Does anyone think that it is strange that crime increases and criminals are multiplied when at the country's expense these compulsory schools of crime are kept up?

Then as to the man who is hardened in crime, who has finished his education and is ready himself to start a normal school in any jail he happens to be in, where he not only teaches young men to be criminals themselves, but how to teach others to be criminals—how shall we treat him? There is but one answer to that question: get rid of the fixed sentence. Where you have a hardened criminal, put him in prison to stay until he is cured.

And now, what chance has our brother, the discharged convict? Our brother, indeed! Who treats him as a brother? Who thinks of employing an ex-convict? There is a small society in Chicago looking after discharged convicts. Let us make it larger. Isn't it a work worth our while to try to give to the discharged prisoner a chance to lead that honest life which he really desires to lead and which he can lead?

One other question. Wherever prisons are ruled upon the political spoils system, it is to the injury of the party that does it and to the injury of the prison in which it is done. Who are the good wardens in our great prisons today? Without exception, they are those who have been long in their positions, who have not happened to be turned out when the seesaw of the state election changed the control of the executive office or the legislature of the state. If political considerations should be left out anywhere it should be in dealing with the criminals of the community.

There are some offices in which the question of a man's party affiliations should be absolutely left out of sight. The man who is to be the superintendent of a lunatic asylum or of any state benevolent institution, above all of a prison, should be utterly independent of the results of party elections.

Queen in the Kitchen. Empress Elizabeth, of Austria, that accomplished horsewoman, that sovereign of a court, whose aristocratic prejudices are of the strongest kind, glories in her talent as a pastry cook. Her daughter, Archduchess Valeria, boasts of having penetrated all the secrets of the ancient and modern cuisine. Queen Victoria is fond of making maclets, and it seems she has several recipes. Her daughter-in-law, the princess of Wales, excels in preparing tea and buttered toast. But princes of royal blood have more serious occupations, and time was when the heir of the throne of England devoted his leisure time to the study of entomology, and when Prince Albert delved assiduously in works of palaeology.

RUTHERFORD B. HAYES.

JURIST AND SCHOLAR.

William Edgar Simonds, United States Commissioner of Patents.

William Edgar Simonds, the present commissioner of patents, was born in Collinsville, Conn., November 21, 1812. He was educated at the common and high schools of that village and also at the Connecticut state normal school. He taught school for a year or two. In August, 1862, he enlisted as a private in the Twenty-fifth Connecticut Infantry, his brother and his stepfather, the only other male members of the family, having already enlisted for three years. He was soon made sergeant major of the regiment, and at the battle of Irish Bend in Louisiana, on the 14th day of April, 1863, he was promoted to be a lieutenant, and was discharged from the service with his regiment in August, 1863.

He graduated from the Yale law school in 1865, and since that time has practiced law in Hartford, Conn. In 1883 he was chairman of the committee on railroads in the Connecticut house of representatives. In 1885 he was the speaker of the Connecticut house of representatives. In 1888 he was elected a member of the Fifty-first congress, in which body he served. While a member of the Fifty-first congress, an international copyright bill was reported by the judiciary committee, debated for two days, and failed of passage by a negative majority of about forty. Mr. Simonds then redrafted the bill, adding its famous thirteenth section, and procured its favorable report to the house. On the third day of the short term he secured its passage through the house, after a vigorous fight, by a majority of about forty. By reason of parliamentary tactics and maneuvers, it had to pass the house, in one shape or another, three times subsequently, each time after a fight over the last passage being about two o'clock on the morning of March 4, 1891, the day on which congress adjourned. For this service in connection with international copyright the government of France conferred upon him the cross of the Legion of Honor. He has filled the lectureship on patent law in the Yale law school since 1881. Yale university gave him an honorary degree at the 1890 commencement. He is the author of a "Digest of Patent Cases," a "Digest of Patent Office Decisions," a work on "Design Patents," and a small work known as a "Summary of Patent Law." His commission as commissioner of patents dates July 1, 1891, and he entered on the performance of the duties connected with the position on August 1, 1891.

AN ABLE POLITICIAN.

William F. Harberty, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

The chiefs of the two national democratic and republican committees have been chosen. William F. Harberty, secretary of state of Pennsylvania, was elected to the position of chairman of the campaign committee of the national democratic organization at New York city, on July 21. Mr. Harberty's first great political fight was in 1852, when, after being elected chairman of the city committee of Philadelphia, he succeeded in overcoming the opposition to the nomination of Pattison, who was then comptroller of Philadelphia, for the office of governor of Pennsylvania. He was next offered, and accepted, the postmastership of Philadelphia, in which position he gave satisfaction. He further distinguished himself in 1890, by taking charge of Gov. Pattison's canvass and piloting him to victory.

HON. WILLIAM F. HARBERTY.

He was next offered, and accepted, the postmastership of Philadelphia, in which position he gave satisfaction. He further distinguished himself in 1890, by taking charge of Gov. Pattison's canvass and piloting him to victory.

The Only Keenest "Signer." The grave of Matthew Thornton, the third signer of the Declaration of Independence, is near Calais, Me. "The story is told by some of his descendants who live in the city," says the Lewiston Journal, "that after signing the declaration he repented and again became an English sympathizer, after which he was arrested and put in prison. They say that while in prison it was discovered that he wore a Freemason's pin and through its influence he was given a certain amount of time to get on to English soil. He settled on the east side of the St. Croix river, built a house and cleared a farm. At one time his house was destroyed by Indians and the only thing saved was a large Bible, which escaped the fire by being thrown into a brook. The Bible and masonic pin are in the possession of one of the descendants now living in Calais."

FIRESIDE FRAGMENTS.

—Tar may be removed from either hands or clothing by rubbing well with lard and then thoroughly washing with soap and water.

—Egg Sauce.—Beat together one-half cup butter and one tablespoonful of flour; add a half pint boiling water, stirring constantly, pepper and salt to taste, and when thick like custard add two hard-boiled eggs, chopped fine. Serve hot.—N. Y. World.

—A Delicious Grape Ice.—One cupful of ripe Concord grapes, one pound of sugar, one quart of water, four whites of eggs. Mash the raw grapes and sugar together, add juice of one lemon, strain into a freezer at once.—Ladies Home Journal.

—Potato Puffs.—Boil three large potatoes, mash while hot, add pepper and salt, a little onion juice, a bit of butter and an egg. When very light, drop by large spoonsful on to a layer of crumbs and roll into balls or croquettes, frying in hot fat.—Good Housekeeping.

—Spanish Pickles.—Prin the crust from some stale bread, bakers', or, if home made, it should be very light, cut in any pretty, fanciful shape, and soak in a mixture of one beaten egg, one cup of cream or milk, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a little nutmeg and cinnamon; fry a light brown and eat with stewed fruit or sweet sauce.—Boston Herald.

—Meat-Pie Crust.—A very nice, meat-pie crust is made by stirring three teaspoonfuls of baking powder into one quart of dry flour, then sifting all together and adding three tablespoonfuls of lard, all mixed in two and a half cupfuls of sweet milk, and a little salt. Work quickly and be careful not to get the dough too stiff.—Detroit Free Press.

—Cucumber Salad.—Peel and slice cucumbers, mix them with sufficient salt, and let them stand half an hour; for the dressing mix two tablespoonfuls of salad oil with the same quantity of vinegar, and add a teaspoonful of sugar, and one of white pepper. Pour over the cucumbers, and serve.—House-keeper.

—Potatoes, Southern Style.—Slice four potatoes very thin and let them stand one-half an hour in cold water. Put them in a pudding dish and add salt, pepper and milk to nearly cover them. Put on the cover of the dish and bake till done, which will require at least one hour, remove the cover and brown, add some bits of butter and serve hot.—Old Homestead.

—Snow Flakes.—Grate a large coconut, being careful not to get any of the brown in to discolored it; heap in a glass dish. Whip one pint of cream, sweeten with fine sugar and mix, pour into another dish; have both brought to the table; when ready to serve, dish out the coconut, and over each dish, dip two spoonfuls of whipped cream; serve with cake.—N. Y. Observer.

—Sausage Kisses.—Have some water boiling in a saucepan. Take a few sausages and plunge them into the water; after they have boiled a few minutes, take them out, strip off the skins and eat them in two and set them aside to cool. Make some light pie crust, cut it into thin squares of four or five inches, lay half a sausage in each, fold over the edges, brush each risole with beaten egg and bake a fine brown.—Household Monthly.

—To bottle raw fruit, have ready some dry glass bottles, wide-mouthed and clean. Burn a match in each to exhaust the air. Place the fruit quickly in each, cork with soft corks and place in a cool oven. Let them remain until the fruit has shrunk one-fourth. Take out the bottles, heat the corks well in and cover them with melted resin. If the fruit has been picked dry and is quite sound, it will keep for months in a cool, dry place and retain all its flavor.—Detroit Free Press.

LOOKED LIKE A FRIGHT.

William's Solution of a Hard One in Political Economy.

"I thought," she said, as she looked up from her sewing that night, "you would be glad to know, William, that I have decided not to get that new dress."

"Hum!" he grunted, approvingly. "It shows that a woman has a keen sense of economy, William, when she is forced to let it remain, when she is forced to let it."

"What do you propose to do?" "Well, I have ripped up the skirt; for eleven dollars I can get some of the loveliest ribbon trimmings—it's shabby, but it will have to do."

"What else?" he chuckled, gleefully. "Then I will need a few new widths of insertion, some velvet, a card of buttons and a pattern, say eleven dollars more."

"I always did like economy," he said, joyously.

"I will hire a girl who, if she works fast, can finish the work in three days; she ought to overhaul the whole shabby old dress in that time, William, so that instead of looking like a fright, as I do now, I shall once more be presentable, and all through close figuring. Now, don't ever say I am not careful of your cash."

"Well," he said, the smile dying from his face, "that figures twenty-five dollars already; is—is there any other little incidentals?"

"O, yes; then, if you let me get a new blouse waist, say at eight dollars and a half, I think, William, I will be all rigged out for the summer, and all by altering over this old dress."

As she spoke, she gave a vicious tug at a seam and ripped it half a yard.

"Eliza," he said, "don't rip another thread; I think I may ask as much, may I not? I have been a good husband to you, eh, Eliza?"

Tears rolled down his cheeks; his voice was as husky as a plate of stewed corn.

THE BEST PLAN FOR OLD AGE.

In Securing a Helpful Circle of Good Friends Now.

When a man is planning for the comfort of his mature and declining years there are some things that he arranges for as matters of course. But there are one or two comforts that he may miss by not appreciating their value until it is too late to provide for them. A particular luxury of this sort, for which a timely arrangement must be made if a man is to have it at all, is a periodical meeting with the men who were young when he was.

In order to secure this enjoyment it is necessary, in the first place, to be young with a considerable number of persons associated in the pursuit of some common interest, and to form more or less intimate relations with them. They must be the right sort of people, too; people whom it is not only edifying to know while they are young, but who promise a development which will make a fair proportion of them good company in their maturity. Having formed such an acquaintance betimes, the habit of renewing it periodically should be started early and carefully nursed, the periods growing gradually less until they become annual.

The simplest way to accomplish all this is doubtless to go early in life to a good college and return yearly to its commencement. But where that has not been feasible, the same end is often otherwise accomplished, as by being a veteran of the war, and meeting one's fellow veterans annually at a grand army encampment, or by being an earnest politician and getting sent pretty regularly to conventions. The points that require attention are that you must meet old friends who were young, or comparatively young, in your company, and from whom you are ordinarily separated. The old friends whom you meet every day won't do. You talk to them when you see them about what happened yesterday and was in the morning paper. The sight of them does not annihilate time for you; your intercourse with them has been too constantly contemporaneous for that. But the old acquaintances whom you only see once a year carry you back every time to the years when you first knew them.—Scribner.

JULES KELLER.

A Crippled Youth Who Has Become a Famous Gymnast.

Jules Keller is the name of a famous gymnast who makes use of his arms for the purposes most people use their legs. With his hands he does all sorts of difficult things—walks, jumps, slides, perhaps dances and skates as well. His hands are not calloused, but smooth, firm and supple.

Jules Keller is about twenty-six years old. He was born of poor parents in Prussia. When a lad he was apprenticed to a trapeze performer. At that time Jules had the use of a good strong pair of legs, and used them to advantage. When he was about twelve years of age, he was performing in St. Petersburg with his master, who used to catch him as he swung off a trapeze. One night his master failed to catch poor Jules, who fell fifty feet, striking upon his legs and back. They carried him home to his mother, and everyone thought he was going to die.

But instead of dying, Jules recovered. He got back a little of the sense of feeling in his legs and feet, though he never would be able to walk upon them again. The strength which was crushed out of them found its way into his arms and hands.

He lay in bed three years. Then, to help himself, he began practicing walking and moving about on his hands, with his helpless legs balanced in the air. He practiced until he was sure that his body would follow unerringly the order of his fingers.

Then he resolved to utilize his new ability. He was able to run up and downstairs on his hands, and also slide down a baluster. He sought and found a public engagement to exhibit this "balmist feat." Of all the feats which this young man has since learned, this remains the most popular.

Perhaps he never would have thought of doing these odd things if his cruel misfortune had not forced him to find some way to help himself. But the same thing has happened to others besides Jules Keller—that what seemed at first the hardest thing in their lives becomes the cause of their final success.—Harper's Young People.

Important Typewriter Decision.

"Judge Lacombe, sitting in the United States Circuit Court here, has, on the motion of the Remington Typewriter Company, granted an injunction against the agents of the Franklin, restraining the sale of that machine on account of infringement of Remington patents. The decision is an important one as it proves the control of the fundamental patents, and may affect other makers of typewriters. The Remington people have heretofore been quite passive, but it is stated on good authority that they are now likely to proceed against all other typewriter manufacturing companies.

In some cases purchasers of machines which infringe Remington patents may also be proceeded against for infringement. Until these cases are definitely settled this action will deter many people from purchasing typewriters which are colorable imitations of the Remington. To save a few dollars a man does not want to buy a machine with a law suit attachment, especially when the other machine is the best."—N. Y. Journalist, June 18, 1892.

PLANTS, TREES AND SHRUBS.

ROVUSTONO, Md., has a pink cup cactus containing one hundred and ninety-eight flowers in full bloom. Two of the best conservatories in the world are to be found in London and in the Jardin des Plantes, Paris. The wild potato vine sometimes has a root that attains the size and occasionally the form of a boy's body and weighs thirty-five pounds. In spite of its lee and severe cold, Labrador possesses 900 species of flowering plants, 50 ferns and over 250 species of mosses and lichens.

On motion the application of Peter Eno to transfer his liquor license to Sweet and Stewart was accepted providing said Sweet & Stewart execute the necessary bond.

The following ordinance was read and adopted.

An ordinance relating to the establishment of fire limits.

The Town Board of the Town of Pelican do ordain as follows:

Sec. 1. No person shall hereafter erect or place any building, or part of a building within the following described limits unless such building or part of building be constructed of stone or brick or of stone and brick combined, and unless the roof thereof shall be of tin, iron or some other substance not inflammable. Such limits are included in the following described lots and blocks of the village of Rhinelander in the Town of Pelican, Oneida Co., Wis. The East half of Block Number Fourteen, the West half of Block Number Fifteen, the West half of Block Number 19, all of Blocks 20, 21, 24 and 25, and lots one to seven inclusive of Block 26, all of the original plat of the aforesaid village of Rhinelander, and all of Block No. 2 of the first addition to said village. Any person or persons who shall violate this section shall forfeit the sum of fifty dollars and costs of action to said town for each and every week any such building or part of building shall remain within the above limits.

Sec. 2. Nothing contained in the preceding section shall prohibit the erection upon the rear of any lots and within 50 feet distant from any street within the aforesaid limits any wooden building to be used as a barn, wood-house or out-house or any other structure appurtenant to the building, which structure shall not exceed twenty feet in length, sixteen feet in width and shall not be more than fourteen feet high, provided that not more than one such building shall be erected on any lot or premises used as one tenement.

Sec. 3. No person shall remove any building of wood from outside of such limits to any place within such limits; any person violating the provisions of this section shall be liable to the penalty provided in section one.

On motion Board adjourned until July 8, 1892, at 9 a. m.

Wm. W. Carr, Town Clerk.

A TWO-TON LIVER.

It Belonged to a Mammoth Monster of the Deep.
It is about a big fish that I write, but it is a true story, says a writer in the Belfast Age. I saw the fish, I took his dimensions by actual measurement and I saw the liver. In the annals of Cape Cod, published by Rev. Mr. Freeman in 1893, he mentions that in 1808 Provincetown had a regulation relating to the carcasses of whales, sharks, horse mackerel, etc., which required that they be towed below low-water mark, which would indicate that these marine animals were so common as to be in some degree offensive in warm weather. Many of them were captured for their oil. Right whales yielded twenty, forty, eighty and sometimes one hundred barrels; humpbacks, fifteen to twenty barrels; grampus, one, two or three; blackfish, one barrel; sharks, from one gallon to seven or eight barrels; porpoise, two gallons, and a boat-load of dogfish yielded about one barrel of oil. Now, my big fish was called a shark, though he was not of the man-eating or shovel-nosed variety. N. E. Atwood, a distinguished and practical ichthyologist of Provincetown, pronounced the fish a liver shark or sea elephant, and considered it rare. The fish was almost entirely white, and as handsome in form as a mackerel. He was caught in 1892, inside of what is called Long Point, forming an outer boundary of Provincetown's beautiful harbor. The fishermen had spread their seines there for mackerel, and this big fish had got entangled in them all about him so that he was easily pulled to the shore, where the tide left him high and dry. Being at that time engaged in business in Provincetown I was invited to visit the monster and see him cut up for the purpose of extracting his liver. By the way, all the oil of a shark is in his liver, while that of a whale, of course, is in his flesh or blubber. I took a rule and measured this shark, and found his length to be just thirty-one feet; the breadth of his tail was seven feet and his circumference in the thickest part sixteen feet.

I have stated that the liver of this shark weighed two tons, and this is how it was determined: The liver was cut in pieces and pitched into a dory; the dory carried a ton and a half in weight besides the rower, as has been proved, bringing her down to her upper straits; the dory was twice loaded deep with this liver, and so the fishermen thought the weight was nearly three tons, but to be within bounds I concluded to call it two tons and it is so recorded in this veracious chronicle. After the oil had been fried out I found that it made seven barrels full and was worth at that time two hundred dollars.

GROWTH OF AMERICAN CITIES.

Country Towns Being Depleted to Fill the Increasing Demand.

In 1890 more than 18,000,000 of the people of the United States lived in cities which had a population of over 8,000. This advance in city development is said by the New York Ledger to be simply phenomenal. The history of mankind presents no parallel. The primeval forests and prairies of forty years ago are now crowded with rapidly progressing centers, filled with the last appliances of an age of invention. To every citizen the administration of his city government is a question of first rate importance. Nearly all his taxation flows into that municipal treasury, and from it comes the school where he educates his family; the sanitation which protects his home from disease; the virtue or vice which makes his dwelling place a heaven or a hell. These statements are strong, but not too strong. The welfare of twenty millions of Americans demands more than partial treatment and cannot be expressed by mere commonplace truisms. A city government is not chosen to-day as a specific corporation constituted for a specific purpose. Probably in the 450 cities of the United States the majority of the officers are elected on outside issues, and not always because of their fitness to manage the peculiar interests committed to their charge. And here is the tap-root of many evils, for politics are the concern of the nation far more than any city government can possibly be. They have a supreme place, but that gives them no right to monopolize every other. Men should be trained to municipal affairs as a distinct profession, as they are in Germany.

The expenditure of money is vast. During the fiscal year of 1891-2 the taxation in one of our great cities amounted to fifty-nine dollars per head for every man, woman and child contained therein. These public funds should not be subordinated to the caprice of professional politicians. Rather should the ends for which they are raised be more completely answered by a better, purer government of the twenty millions, nearly one-third of our total population, concerned in this vital question. Our country towns are giving up the majority of their youth to the city's incessant demand. The next century will see New York the largest emporium in the world, and many sister rivals scattered all over our territory. In view of these facts, we pronounce this question of city government a burning one; and if there could be any other with more far-reaching and imperative issues to our national life we declare we should like to have it named.

Tides in the Mediterranean.

For practical purposes the Mediterranean may be accepted as being what it is popularly supposed to be, a tideless sea, but it is not so in reality. In many places there is a distinct rise and fall, though this is more frequently due to winds and currents than to lunar attraction. At Venice there is a rise of from one to two feet in spring tides, according to the prevalence of winds up or down the Adriatic. In many straits and narrow arms of the sea there is a periodical flux and reflux, but the only place where the tidal influence, properly so called, is unmistakably observed is in the gulf of Gabes, where the tide runs at the rate of two or three knots an hour and the rise and fall varies from three to eight feet.

TRICKED THE DRUMMER.

The Clever Scheme of Some Maine Practical Jokers.

The town of Dexter, Me., boasts the hardest-hearted set of wags to be found anywhere. The most of them are constantly on the lookout for the subject of a practical joke, and hardly a day passes that they do not find one. The latest, related by the Lewiston Journal, is on the fresh cigar drummer who thought his merchandise better than anything of the sort on earth. In his travels he carries in his coat pocket a big cigar case and advertises himself and his goods by giving freely of his brands to any who will smoke them. He was in Dexter this week. The day was hot and he left his coat and cigar case on a chair while he sat in a cooling draught in the door. One of the jokers got a rubber comb and broke out twenty teeth. They were small and sharp. Into the end of each cigar a rubber tooth was pushed, and with a small nail the tooth was driven in out of sight. The tobacco leaf came together, completely hiding the tooth. Then the jokers waited for the fun. Soon the cigar man, now well cooled down, began business. Going into a store he first gave away a cigar, which the intended customer began to smoke. Soon the air was orderiferous, not with a sweet and fragrant smell, but with one not unlike that of old gunlocks or burning rubber boots. The customer sickened and threw away the weed, and said he had on hand cigars enough to last all summer. Another dealer had a similar experience. Still another was given a day's nausea, and when that drummer got through with his gifts he was hated by nearly every cigar dealer in town. He packed his goods in sorrow, and does not know to this day that an old rubber comb from the stable box of a hostler wrecked him commercially in Dexter.
